Learn more about OpenHIE at our Community Meeting on 13, 15, & 21 September!

OpenHIE is a community of people focused on the sharing and use of health data. Our community offers best practice recommendations and an architecture that serves the needs of resource emerging environments. Learn more about the community and our work on our website: https://ohie.org/.

OpenHIE's annual community meetings provide a unique opportunity for implementers, government officials, and tech developers to come together to learn and share with each other. Collaboration, knowledge-sharing, practical OpenHIE models, priorities, governance frameworks, and other important topics and approaches with health system information exchanges–are just a few expectations when attending one of the annual community meetings.

This year's meeting (OHIE22) will take place in a virtual format, with free registration, over three days in September 2022 (13, 15, & 21 September). During these days the following opportunities will be available:

- Welcome event featuring a new member info session and the Coffee & Community networking event to kick-off OHIE22
- OHIN: HIE Journeys; a day to dive deep into country implementations where community members share their HIE journeys from plans to practice with time for questions and further discussions
- Participant-led unconference sessions to help drive the agenda and potentially influence community roadmaps
